

August

One more turn
Of the
Big Wheel drags us
Forward. You
Can see the
Push-and-pull,
Feel gravity, just
By standing still
And paying
Attention. Yesterday
I wept into the
Brown grass
In an attempt
To turn it green.
The soil hardened
Like clay in the
Kiln and the roots,
Without wiggle
Room, surrendered.

August always
Has been a
Rebirth of sorts,
Even when it
Feels like a
Remarkable death.
I outgrew my Old bike and
Placed it on
The curb, in its
Absence I
Let the wind
Move me.
I must breathe
Life into everyone
I love. I
Must ride this
Wave that is
Bent on moving
Through me.
I miss doing
Nothing with
You.